It is not so large and combersome as the ordinary Fanning-Mill, and is shorter, bringing the wind directly under the seives. The screens are longer, giving the grain more surface to run ovet. It has a strong, even blast; blowing evenly the entire width of the screens; (many Fans blow out good wheat in the centre, while cheat and light stuff run down the sides of the screens with the good wheat.) The shakirg-shoe has a true circular or rotary mo-ticn, which relieves the Mill of the constant jar and shaking of the ordinary Fahning-Mill, causing it to run smother, and with less noise, and also spreading the grain evenly over the entire surface of the screens. It has a

SELF-FEEDING HOPPER, which gives the grain a steady and uninterrupted flow on the sieves; after which it is caught by the concentrated blast which carries Smut, Cheat, and light substances out of the mill. Finally, the perfectly cleaned grain is discharged in a concentrated body, into a half bushel, at the front of the mill, thereby avoiding the WASTE, as well as the TIME and LABOE, formerly unavoidable in incumring up the grain.
